CHROMALINE BOARD NAMES CLAUDE PIGUET EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT

DULUTH, MN. — The Chromaline Corporation, a developer, manufacturer and worldwide marketer of photochemical imaging systems, has named Claude Piguet Executive Vice President.

The Chromaline Board of Directors named Piguet Executive Vice President at its December 19, 2000 meeting. Piguet has been with the company since 1990, serving previously as Vice President of Operations. Piguet is responsible for manufacturing, the quality department and facility maintenance. He is also heavily involved in the company's European market.

“We are pleased to recognize Claude’s leadership by naming him to this position,” said Bill Ulland, Chromaline Chairman, President and CEO. “I look forward to Claude’s continued contributions to the company and to the counsel and support that he provides.”

Bill Ulland, CEO and Chairman of the Board, was also named company President by the Board of Directors. Ulland, a long time Chromaline board member, assumed the role of CEO in February of 2000.

Chromaline stock is traded on the Nasdaq SmallCap market under the symbol CMLH.
